Introduction to the Special Edition

The regular annual bibliography has become, at almost 250 pages, unwieldy for many. In response I have created a much shorter and more focused bibliography. Based on feedback, it seems that the highest demand is for recent publications that analyze conflict issues. I have given this a rather wide definition, but I have had to exclude several bibliography sections that are included in the regular version. Within some sections older sources have been removed. In addition, non-academic press books have been eliminated.

The publications included in this version are up-to-date as of the beginning of February 2012. However, I do not claim to have included every relevant publication. In terms of the regular annual bibliography, I do take suggestions for sources to include, as long as they are long-form articles and reports, preferably from peer-reviewed journals or institutes. In terms of books I only include analytical books, not narratives or personal stories.

As for comments about the scope and quality of the bibliography, I do welcome suggestions and criticisms. Just please keep in mind that this bibliography is a free service provided by one individual who works in their spare time with no funding whatsoever. There is a limit to how comprehensive these bibliographies can be.
